Flashing red and yellow lights accompanied by an alarming siren in the distance runs through my head all the time, it excites me to know that in the near future I will work in a hospital helping patients of many kinds. My dream has always been to be an emergency room doctor. One of my inspirations was my mother. When I was five, my mom was diagnosed with endometriosis, a condition where the cells that grow and shed in the uterus grows in other areas of the body. She is periodic acute pain that prevents her from being able to do any activities with me and my sister, and sometimes requires visits to the ER. She struggles everyday with the pain from a condition that has no cure. Watching my mom experience the pain that she goes through makes me want to help other people who are also experiencing pain and sickness.

Going to college opens up so many doors for me. The college experience is like no other and you get to meet people from all over. It also gives life changing opportunities that I will need in my future. College pushes people to think past their mental barriers and receive knowledge on topics of culture and studies within the world surrounding us. For instance, a University may have an excellent pre-med program and opportunity to volunteer at the Hospital which would help me get a better understanding and prepare for my future career in medicine. A University also has many organizations and clubs that would help me build my professional skills including leadership, teamwork, communication, prioritization and organizations that allow me to volunteer in my community.

What keeps me motivated to accomplish my goals and dreams is the thought of being able to support my family financially and being able to give back to my community. I also want to try my best to help people feel better in any way possible. I will use my experience to become a great student, sister, friend, daughter, and person. Throughout my college years. I strongly believe that going to college will help to achieve my goals in life.
